(c) Average population per bank office (APPBO) in Gujarat as on June 30, 1993 works out to 12,000 in rural areas which compares well with the national APPBO of 13,000.

(d) and (e) The aim of Branch Ex pansion Policy 1985—90 was to achieve a population coverage of 17,000 (1981 cesus) per bank office in rural and semi-urbaa areas in each block so as to eliminate wide spatial gaps in the availability of banking facilities so that a rm al branch was available generally within a distance of 10 kms. With the opening of bank branches in rural areas, the average poptilation per bank branch in rural and semi-branch areas has come down to 13,000 by the end of 1989. At present, there is a network df 35313 branches of commer cial bants in the rural areas of the country. Nevertheless, there may still be need for a number of addltiottal bank branches in raral ureas generally on two counts.

(i) Service area allocated to a bank branch may be found to be unmanageable due to large number of villages allotted, number of constituents to be catered Io and long distances|diffi-cult terrain involved in servicing the area.

(i) The increase in business of a rural branch justifiably warranting an addit bank branch which could be viable.

Under the Branch Expansion Programme 1990—95 of Reserve Bank of India, it has now been left to the judgement of the individual banks to assess the need for additional bank branches in the respective service areas of their rural branches.
